

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. Indiana's Telephone Privacy law has improved your time at home. We aren't bothered by an endless string of calls every evening soliciting goods and services we have no interest in purchasing. The number of calls we receive is very near zero. I think as long as Indiana is meeting the minimum federal requirement, the federal government should just leave it alone!